This week, we're announcing the 60 companies being honored this year as Best Places to Work. These companies come from different industries but share at least one thing in common: They've built a workplace in which employees feel engaged and energized at work.

This is now the 19th year of our Best Places to Work awards, and 106 companies submitted nominations to be included in this year's program. Winners were selected based on data collected by our partner, Quantum Workplace of Omaha, Nebraska.

Quantum surveys the employees of nominated companies. A significant number of employees need to complete the surveys – and rate their workplace highly – for companies to qualify for the award.

All 60 of our winners will be profiled in our Dec. 9 edition and honored the same day at our annual Best Places to Work event, held in-person this year at the Albany Marriott.

Yesterday, we announced the winners in the small and medium company divisions. Here are the winners in the medium-large and large company divisions.
